

SOLDIER BONUS BILL TO BE ARGUED NOV. 8; COMPLAINT IS FILED

(Special to the Gazette.)

Madison, Oct. 23.—The official complaint in the so-called soldier bonus cases will be filed in the supreme court the latter part of this week. Attorney General George H. Blaine announced Thursday that his department would file a demurrer in the matter. It is expected that Charles H. Crockett, representing upwards of 200 students, will take a similar course. This will join the issues before the supreme court and permit a full argument on all points of issue involved.

Plans are being made for the argument of the case before the court the 8th of November. The deputy attorney general for the states, has been detailed by Attorney General Blaine to present the arguments in favor of the validity of the bonus laws in the high court.

The state board of education is going forward with the auditing of the claims of the states as if no litigation were pending. While it will not be possible to make payments until the court has determined the matter, the state board of education is going forward with the auditing of the claims of the states as if no litigation were pending. While it will not be possible to make payments until the court has determined the matter, the state board of education is going forward with the auditing of the claims of the states as if no litigation were pending.

While a federal issue has been raised there seems to be a feeling here that the cases will not be carried to the federal court. The state supreme court sustains the laws. The application filed by Attorney H. J. Butler, on application of the state board of education, states that one of the points of issue is the exclusive right of the federal government to handle the soldier bonus payments. It is pointed out by some that an appeal to the federal courts might delay matters several months. Tax Commissioner Carroll D. Wood, who has direct charge of the administration of the state income tax law, said Thursday that the tax commission would be unable to finish the computation of the surtaxes before Nov. 1. Impression gained by other officials is that the surtaxes on incomes would raise approximately $5,000,000 for the cash soldier bonus and about one-fifth of that amount for the educational bonus.

A campaign has now been started by the state board of education to bring additional soldiers, who desire education, into the vocational schools of the state. About 3,000 of the 10,000 who made application for an education are already in the schools.

HISTORICAL SOCIETY HAS ANNUAL MEETING

(Special to the Gazette.)

Madison, Oct. 23.—At the annual business meeting of the State Historical society at Madison at 2 p. m. today a full set of officers for the ensuing year were elected. The retiring president is William K. Coffin, Eau Claire. Vice-presidents whose terms expired with this meeting are John J. Tucker, singer, Monroe; Rev. S. G. Messmer, Milwaukee; William J. Starr, Eau Claire, and Judge John B. Winslow. Madison. Two vacancies at present existing in the number of vice-presidents of the society were also to be filled. On the board of curators the vacancy created by the death of Frederic K. Conover, supreme court reporter, was to be filled, and 12 men elected for three-year terms as curators.

The annual report presented by Supt. M. M. Qualie revealed a gratifying growth in the society's membership and collections. John Trotwood Moore of the state of Tennessee did not appear before the annual meeting Thursday afternoon to present his claims to the Tennessee papers in the Draper collection of the state historical society. Mr. Moore said he would appear at a later date.

The Draper collection is one of the most valuable of original documents to be found anywhere in the country. Scholars from all parts of the country have come to examine these original sources.

General Hagan of the 32nd division will deliver the annual address before the state historical society tonight at the university gymnasium. At noon today General Hagan spoke before the Rotary club of Madison.

AUSTRALIAN HINTERLAND
Although it contains some of the most modern of cities, Australia also has a hinterland, much of which white men have never seen.

And the Australian wilderness is an especially attractive one for the explorer because much of it is high, dry and healthy, while most of the other unexplored regions of the world are either unhealthy tropical lands or the frozen arctic.

Australia contains several mountain ranges that are little known, the Musgrave mountains and the Enderby range being among these. It has also some splendid forest regions about the lower slopes of these mountains. In both the mountain and the forest regions are birds, animals and plants that are still unknown to science and each expedition which goes into the country brings out something new.

The savages who inhabit this interior region are cannibals, but not dangerous to white men. Those that live near the coast range are a tall, well built people in the lowest stage of savagery, going practically naked and having no weapons except spears. They are sticks when on march, as making fire is a laborious and difficult process for them. These people, like the ancient Spartans, destroy all the crippled and deformed children.

They carry the same wedding-out process a step father by killing and eating old people who are no longer useful to the tribe. The savages of the Misgrange range are always at war with these Enderby natives, and the prisoners taken by either side are usually eaten.

NEWS FOR BOYS AND GIRLS

Smuggling and Slipper Slap

By NOBLE PRICE COOK
The All Around American Girl loves the out-doors. Here are some jolly games for her and her friends.

Two leaders choose sides by counting "One, two, three—Out goes she!" Or,

"Alma, malna, moma, mika; Bassana, bona, strike; Hare, ware, frown, huck; Hatico, balloo, wee, wo, wa."

First choosers' side are "Outs"; second choosers' side are "Ins." "Outs" have a desirable object or "treasure" which they are supposed to have smuggled. They hide it among themselves out of sight of the "Ins," or in sight of the "Ins" by secretly exchanging from one to another behind their backs.

The "Ins" stay in a den (about 4 feet by 6 in size) and the "Outs" run and hide. They must not go beyond boundaries previously decided. Before reaching final hiding place they call "Smugglers!" This signals the "Ins" to start the chase. The object of the "Ins" is to catch the one player or among the "Outs" who is Guardian of the treasure.

If the guardian returns to the den without being caught, her side wins and goes out again for the next game. But if the Guardian is caught before she gets to the den, the "Ins" win the game and go out next time.

Whenever an "In" catches an "Out" who is a prisoner. The prisoner puts her hand and foot in a special trap. Says "Deliver it!" Everybody shouts "deliver it!" and all players return to the den. If the prisoner has the "treasure" she must give it up. If not, she is released, and the games goes on.

Slipper Slap.
Girl comes in to circle. Odd girl stands in center and an old slipper or folded newspaper, tied firmly with a string, is passed around the circle.

The player, whenever possible, advances to center girl with slipper in hand and slaps her with it on the shoulder or arm. The player must not be caught but must return to the ring and quickly pass slipper behind her back to other players. Another player runs to center and slaps Center Player who tries to catch the slipper. If she succeeds, she may take a place in the circle and the girl who is caught becomes Center Player. Girls may pass the slipper back and forth around the ring very fast to make the game exciting.

Paris Tourists Shiver As They Sleep In Heated Hotels, If They Get In

Paris, Tuesday, Oct. 21.—American tourists who had recently reached Paris visit that they might have brought their own coal supply with them. October has been unusually warm and dry, but there is an official prohibition against the use of coal for central heating purposes before November 1 so that only those who are able to obtain a supply of wood are heated.

Travelers just arrived from Berlin and Vienna say that prices there are much higher and heat also is lacking.

Paris seems just as badly crowded as at this time last year. Tourists wander the streets, seeking accommodations.

Apartment and boarding houses are as greatly crowded as the hotels. Parties are running on short time all because of the lack of coal.

SCHOOLS TO OBSERVE AMERICANIZATION DAY

Monday, Oct. 27, has been set aside by proclamation of Governor Emmanuel Philipp, as Americanization day.

On that day schools in the city and country are to devote a short time in the afternoon to the discussion of the life and works of Theodore Roosevelt, who according to the proclamation typifies the ideal American.

"I recommend that teachers in the city," said H. H. Faust, superintendent of schools, "devote a short period on Monday to appropriate exercises which can be produced on so short a notice, in accordance with the proclamation."

O. D. Antislip, county superintendent of schools, has received many copies of a pamphlet prepared by the Americanization committee, which contains the life and excerpts from the writings of Roosevelt. They will be sent out to the rural teachers that they may have in preparation of a suitable program.

High School Notes

A new program system has been installed at the high school, which the whereabouts of each teacher and student every period of the day is accounted for. Each class has a different colored card; Freshmen B, green; Freshmen A, pink; sophomores B, light blue; sophomores A, deep blue; junior B, light red; junior A, deep red; senior B, light yellow; senior A, dark yellow. White cards indicate free periods, and assembly periods for the teachers.

On each card is written the class reciting, subject, period, number of class room, and enrollment of class. The board containing the cards has been placed in Principal Bauer's office, where it can easily be referred to by teachers and students.

The student body this morning sang community songs under the supervision of Miss Florence Snyder.

Green stools made by the boys of the manual training class have been placed in the dressing rooms of the gymnasium department.

New desks have been ordered for those teachers who are without desks.

Ranking for the freshmen B class is being compiled. The ranks will represent the work of six weeks.

Thirty-five freshmen and sophomore girls turned out last evening for captain ball. This is the largest turnout which has taken place at a time this year, according to Miss Pauline Calien, physical director.

Another mysterious date has been hurried at the students and faculty, that of Oct. 29. Posters with question marks and the date printed on them have been placed around the building. The students are ready to expect almost anything on that day.

S. C. Burnham, clerk of the board of education, is missed at the high school by teachers and students. Mr. Burnham has been ill for many days.

MRS. FORD IS AT R. C. MEETING; SUPPLIES FOR DRIVE RECEIVED

Mrs. H. A. Ford, campaign chairman for the third Red Cross roll call is in Milwaukee today attending a conference of the Wisconsin campaign managers and publicity managers being held at the Hotel Pfister.

An afternoon and evening session will be held. Supper will be served to the conference at 6 o'clock. Dr. Shomay, E. Green, national publicity director of the Red Cross, and E. K. Hardy, manager of the central division, will address the meeting.

A deluge of Red Cross posters, buttons, 100 percent flags, and other material for the third Red Cross roll call, Nov. 2-11, is being received at the local Red Cross office, postoffice building. It is being assorted under the direction of Miss Hattie L. Alden, secretary of the Rock county chapter, who is in charge of the office. Miss Naude Sykes is in charge of the distribution of the material.

The Boy Scouts will be called out Saturday for distribution of the posters about town. Materials are being sent to the following chapters: Charles Taylor, Oxford; Prof. P. O. Holt, Edgerton; R. M. Richmond, Evansville; Mrs. George Bush, Footville; Mrs. D. J. McLaughlin, Johnsonville; Mrs. William Morton, La Prairie; Mrs. Walter McComb, Lima Center; Grant W. Davis, Milton; F. M. Warner, Milton Junction; Charles Taylor, Oxford; and J. T. Hooper, Wisconsin School for Blind auxiliary. La Prairie is no longer a branch, its work being carried on with Janesville.

The Janesville organization for the drive is progressing rapidly. Ready response of merchants to solicitations for underwriting Red Cross advertisements was met by the advertising solicitors, the Misses Margaret Jeffers, Father Harris, Dorothy Karet, and Carolyn Richardson. Letters have been sent to all factory heads asking cooperation in the drive.

Enthusiasm marks the ranks of the 150 women workers who have been mobilized to carry on the city drive. Ten thousand buttons, the minimum goal of the workers in their drive for $1 memberships, new and renewal of old. Fifty cents of the $1 is to stay in Janesville for home service work.

The peace program of the Red Cross includes the establishment of community health centers and extension of the nursing resources of cities, towns, and rural communities; broadening of Red Cross home service; increased Junior Red Cross activities; extension of Red Cross facilities for emergency disaster relief; completion of relief measures for victims of the war; and preparation to fulfill whatever duties may be laid upon the Red Cross as the official volunteer relief society authorized to assist the army and navy.

strategy when in possession of the ball, both in the matter of punting and drop or place kicking as well as in forward passing.

It is very important that the general realize at all times the position of his team on the field and know what plays to make. He should not work his team into the side line unnecessarily and thereby limit his strategy. It is needless to say that he should make every effort to keep the opponents away from his goal; therefore, he should avoid plays which might produce an accident within striking distance of the goal. No attempts at forward passes near your own goal are justifiable unless it seems worth while to take every chance in order to hold on to the ball to get a score or to prevent further scores.

In general it is good defensive strategy to punt the ball whenever you are within 35 yards of your own goal, for by so doing you will avoid all chances of a fumble which might give the ball to the opponent within striking distance of your goal.

Whenever a team is within striking distance of the opponent's goal it is advisable to use the strongest and surest gaining plays by the surest gaining men.

LICENSE ALL DRIVERS.

A youth sat in police headquarters yesterday morning. He had killed a woman. He was but sixteen years old and he appeared to be a bright lad. He seemed in a way to realize what he had done, although he was not of the type that expresses feeling. He was dry-eyed and answered questions put to him by officials in an alert and certain manner. He was a victim of state laws which allow children to drive high-power speed engines through our streets.

That youth did not intend to kill the woman. In fact he did all his youthful brain directed him to do, in an attempt to avoid striking her. The victim evidently became confused, according to stories told by eye-witnesses. The boy has been charged with manslaughter and no matter what punishment is meted out to him he will ever have the shadow of taking a fellow creature's life hanging over him.

That boy perhaps used the best judgment at his command, but he is only a child in years. He was given control of an automobile and turned loose on the streets. The state law gives him the right to drive, but it does not protect people, for a boy of 16 cannot have the judgment necessary to successfully operate, under all conditions, a machine like the automobile.

Drivers of automobiles should be licensed only after they have demonstrated their ability to be trusted with a machine. Thus such tragedies as visited us Tuesday night will in a measure be avoided.

THE DAY OF THE WILD MEN.

German, Austrian and Russian revolutionaries at Gary, Ind., have not only been prime movers in the steel strike, but have been fomenters of agitation for the overturn of the government. This is revealed by raids among the Reds of Gary, conducted by regular army officers a few days ago.

The quality of Americanism of this outfit came to light when a meeting place of the Reds was searched, and an Imperial German flag eight feet square was discovered. It is only fair to say that two American flags were also found in the same place, each two inches square.

Denouncing the treachery of these foreign disturbers, who into this country and have no apparent intention of becoming citizens, has become a commonplace. Something more than talk is required in the case of men who plot trouble for us all.

We read that I. W. W. influence is largely responsible for the dock workers' strike in New York. The extreme radicals have openly flouted and insulted the international president of the union, because he asked the men to live up to agreements they had made, and return to work. The maritime business of our greatest port waits on the pleasure of extremists who have thrown off the restraints of regular leadership.

This is the day of the wild man. The strikes and disorders we are witnessing are not due to the fact that men are unemployed, or that they are getting so little that their families suffer want. The "unrest" we hear so much about is due to the restless desire to get as much and to give as little as possible, and to assert the divine right of force to smash things up generally.

Vice President Atterbury of the Pennsylvania system, who managed our railroad activities in Franco during the war, figures that in the recent period in which the average wage has increased 100 percent, the average production per man has shrunk 40 percent.

All these tendencies are surely carrying us toward some ultimate development whose purport and outcome we cannot guess. Whether we can get back to sanity and a normal basis without big trouble is what we'd like to know. Certainly a strike of soft coal miners for a six-hour day, a five-day week, and very greatly increased pay will not help us ordinary mortals to reduce the cost of living.

MOVIES NOT TO BLAME

As long as there are boys there will be bad boys. It is simply a matter of training and environment.

The other day two boys were arrested for having taken part in robberies that have netted them over a million dollars and in which fifteen persons are said to have lost their lives.

And the desperadoes are nothing more than boys!

They told the police that they were influenced to become robbers by seeing moving pictures of the James brothers—famous criminal characters.

Had it been a few years earlier, they would have said they were influenced by the dime novel.

Before that, it would have been by drink.

A criminal never forgets his excuses.

But it wasn't the moving pictures that caused the delinquency this time. The boys simply hadn't been kept busy doing the right things. Idle hands and idle minds are not a healthy condition.

Boys should be kept too busy to get into mischief. They should be hustling about, playing football this sort of weather, or cowboy, or run-shoop-run, or just being wild men and building themselves caves out along the "creek".

Boys who are busy don't get into any serious trouble. The Y. M. C. A. will keep our boys busy—will furnish them with clean sport and companionship. Will you support the "Y"?

COMFORT STATIONS.

The council has before it a proposition to provide comfort stations for men and women. This is one of the most necessary improvements which will have to be made in the near future. For years saloons have been used as comfort stations for men and with the closing of good of these places the cities of the nation will have to furnish something to fill the need.

It has been suggested that two stations be built on each side of the river—one each for men and one for women, making four in all. In larger cities such places are located in the heart of business districts and it is probably feasible that such a plan be followed here.

Kaiser and Insurance.

News dispatches tell of the former Kaiser Wilhelm's taking out insurance worth $4,000,000 on his property, Doorn Castle, in Holland. And the Dutch are shouting about it.

The Kaiser is a self-invited visitor to Holland. And he remains closely within his castle and garden. He says word, say correspondents, to keep in good health. But his actions show that he fears for his life and property.

Dutch newspapers and citizens are asking that he be deported and that his court and courtiers be driven from the little kingdom. But Wilhelm hangs on, buys a new castle, liberally sprinkles it with life insurance,

HAPPINESS.
The rich are not
A happy lot
Unless these treasures
They possess:
An honest name,
Deserving fame,
A prattling babe
And its caress.
With all the gold
They've now to hold,
In loneliness
Their surviving ends
Unless they know
Where'er they go
The honest love
Of honest friends.
The rich are not
A care-free lot
Unless they own
If all they own
Is sordid wealth.
For perfect bliss
They must have this:
The glorious gift
Of ruddy health.
There must be smiles

The contempt and hatred of the world bothers William only a little. His vainglorious spirit continues with him.

But his sound sense seems to it that his castle is covered with insurance to the amount of $4,000,000. He hasn't yet lost his business ability.

What he plans to do with his court and friends in Holland can only be a matter of speculation. But so long as he is allowed virtual freedom, he is a menace to the world.

Friends With Congress

By FREDERIC J. HASKIN, Director
Janesville Daily Gazette Information Bureau,
Washington, D. C.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 23.—A new cordiality is springing up between Capitol Hill and the rest of the city. Congressmen and senators are being invited frequently to address citizens' associations on all sorts of subjects, from the price of milk in the district to the league of nations. And those who accept are being rewarded with a lot of applause, handshakes, and other evidences of friendly interest. During the past summer more congressmen and senators than ever before have been observed sitting on front porches of friendly associations, engaged in neighborly confab with local inhabitants (Washington has no citizens). Some congressmen are beginning to visit the city. One is not after all inhabited exclusively by profiteers, rent sharks, and "cave dwellers," but contains a certain percentage of real human people.

This new cordiality cordial between the men who make the laws for Washington and the voters inhabits who have to obey them, is a spontaneous and unaccountable thing. It is the result of a deliberate propaganda set on foot by the Federation of Citizens' Associations of the District of Columbia under the leadership of its president, W. B. Westlake. This propaganda is conducted by the Washington Post, which can catch more congressmen with honey than you can with vinegar. After the congressman has been invited to the city, the object of the federation is to induce him to vote for an amendment to the constitution of the United States, permitting the "official" home of the congressman to be used as a place of residence for a member to congress, to vote for the presidential electors and to sue and be sued in the federal courts.

Inhabitants Have No Vote.
For Washington, today, as Mr. Westlake will tell you with unctious, is the only city in the civilized world in which the inhabitants have no voice in the making of the laws which govern them. It is the only place in America where still exists that ancient wrong of taxation without representation.

If the citizens of Washington want a new school building or more parks, or a new bridge, they must petition the city council, which then sends a representative of their own in congress to demand that the money for building a school. One school house in the city of Washington, for instance, has been under construction for years. The city council has no power to do it. They must petition the congress, which then sends a representative of their own in congress to demand that the money for building a school. One school house in the city of Washington, for instance, has been under construction for years. The city council has no power to do it. They must petition the congress, which then sends a representative of their own in congress to demand that the money for building a school.

But the Washington people, led by their joint committee of 150 leading citizens, are not content with petitioning their domestic difficulties. What they want to emphasize is the fact that it is wrong for the capital of the United States to be represented in its congress. They appeal to all the citizens of the United States to pull them out of this hole. It is the citizens of the United States who are to be benefited by their congressmen and senators, who can do it.

Appeal to Legislators.
Direct appeal to the legislature's "house" is the first step in the appeal to the country at large, and the federation campaign of friendship and appreciation is a part of the appeal. It is not meant to imply that the relation between the legislators and the local people have heretofore been hostile, or that they are now suddenly being distant and in spots somewhat vinegary. Washington has been in the past socially disappointing to a good many congressmen. The term "cave dwellers," which has been so often applied to the local social set suggests about how cordial it has been to the congressmen, and the lack of cordiality has been felt more because a good many congressmen come to Washington with the idea that they are about to embark on an impressive social career. Perhaps this idea is entertained by the congressional wives and daughters more than by the congressmen themselves, but the effect is the same. If Mrs. Congressman thinks the Washington people are a lot of crabs, Mr. Congressman usually comes to agree with her. The average congressional family which arrives here equipped with new gowns and large expectations finds it difficult to get along in the city. Other congressional families similarly equipped. Hence a congressional circle has grown up which usually comes to agree with her. The average congressional family which arrives here equipped with new gowns and large expectations finds it difficult to get along in the city. Other congressional families similarly equipped. Hence a congressional circle has grown up which usually comes to agree with her.

Contact Is Useful.
The usefulness of a little contact between these two separate organizations is becoming increasingly apparent to the ghostly members of the arrived congressman is socially more or less at the mercy of the inhabitant, that individual is politically much at the mercy of the congressman. Both parties have axes to grind, but the "cave dwellers" axe is a good deal larger and in more urgent need of grinding than that of the congressman.

It is true that there are a certain number of people in Washington with social aspirations who are not really inhabitants of the city. They are the sort who own houses here and merely come here for the "season." A good many make this place their legal residence for the purpose of securing a low tax on intangible property. One wealthy man told a senator that he could keep pay for the upkeep of his household, but that he had no money he saved in taxes on stocks and bonds by making this his official residence. He spends only a few months a year here.

And these wealthy social lights, who own the long rows of palatial but generally empty houses in northwest Washington, usually visit their attentions upon vice-presidents, cabinet officers, and diplomats rather than upon congressmen. Vice-President Marshall has consumed three months of the year in Washington, and the vice-president is regarded as the next best thing to a congressman. It is estimated that Mr. Marshall has consumed three months of his weight in high-grade comestibles to satisfy the social ambitions of hostesses who aspire to entertain someone in the "official" home.

Thus of all the entertaining which goes on in Washington, only a small part is directed to the useful end of "creating a better understanding between the congressmen and the people of the city."

ON THE SPUR of the MOMENT

ROY E. MOULTON

THE MUSCULAR ERA.
I often lie in bed and think an awful thing is working—
How nice it is to push a pen across
A desk and shirk a job.
Alas! Alack! the time has come, my visions take a fall;
The pen-shower's place is fixed and muscle gets it all.

When I was young I dreamed—too badly of dignity and wealth—
How education gets the only while labor gets—good health!
The dope was wrong. Today I find that brawn receives the cash.
While I, poor dope, by schooling spoiled, must wait that I may hash.

My job is gone, my luck is nil, my room is now to let,
I planted elbows on a desk, and all I raised was debt.

VACATIONS.
The man who invented vacations had the right idea, but he cut them very skimpy and didn't do his subject justice. Considering the chance he had, he might have made his name immortal. There was nothing standing in his way. He had an assessment of 52 weeks to choose from,
but he decided to be a hard-boiled egg and so chose only two weeks.
He surrounded his invention, the vacation, with all the allurement that could have been found on Mount Olympus. He made the vacation so attractive that his victims began thinking about it 60 weeks before the start.

No vacation in the history of the world was ever within 60 percent of being up to expectations. Many persons have been so dissatisfied with them that they longed to be back in their comfortable jobs within two days.

The main drawback to vacations is that a person worries too much about their long absence. What they arrive they begin to count the days before they will have to start back.

Most people are anxious to swap vacations and vacation places with somebody else as soon as they get off the train and nobody ever picks the right two weeks.

About the only way to find a satisfactory vacation out of all the vacations offered is to conduct a series of experiments covering the entire year.
If a person could do this he might find two weeks that would suit him and a spot where he could spend the two weeks without suffering nervous prostration.

ROLES ARE FILLED IN
KATCHA KOO; SCHOOL CHILDREN TAKE PART

A musical comedy containing 200 local people with special costumes and scenery and a complete orchestra. Such will be the attraction at the Myers theatre Tuesday and Wednesday, Oct. 28-29. The production, "Katcha Koo" which bids fair to out rival any other of its kind ever seen here, has under its management the past week and a half, those participating are enthusiastic over the professional nature of the play.

Additional principal characters of the cast are the Misses Gertrude Cassidy, Flora Ryan, Genevieve Cushing, and Hazel Kennedy as the four wives of the Maharajah, and Miss Catherine Schaeffer as Urbannah, the Hindoo high priestess. The entire piece is built about Dr. Irving Clark, who appears in the leading role of "Katcha Koo."

The grand finale of the production is also said to be attractive. Over 100 local school children participate in a miniature pageant, representing all the allied nations of the late war.

Tickets for the production have already made their appearance. A large delegation will be present from Beloit where the production was given so successfully a little over a week ago.

Of the forty "Katcha Koo" shows now in progress over the country, the local attempt is expected to be one of the best.

Says Women in Ship
Building Will Stay

[By International News.] London.—"Women have come into shipbuilding and engineering and have come to stay," says Professor Kirkaldy of Birmingham university. Figures prepared by Miss L. Grier, however, show that, taking industry as a whole, there are only 2 percent more women employed now than in 1914. Where at the time of the armistice 36 percent of all industrial workers were women, women now form only 28 percent.

Issue Warning to Watch
For Counterfeit W. S. S.

[By International News.] San Francisco, Cal.—Look out for counterfeit W. S. S. stamps! This is the warning issued here and being followed closely by merchants. The warning was issued by William MacCoe, assistant treasurer of the United States at the San Francisco sub-treasury.

The counterfeits are photographic reproductions in good color blue ink, but the fine lines behind the portrait in the genuine appear in the counterfeit as a solid color.

The counterfeit stamps are pasted on genuine certificates and cashed at their prevailing rate by merchants.

The Daily Novelette

"The Cull of Spring
"Nope. 'Nother' don't!" grinned the office boy of the "Morning Glory" editorial rooms. "The editor won't see you."

"But, surely if he knew—" began the man, protesting.

"Nope. Can't be done. Too busy." And the boys whistled "Kiss Me, Kid" as he went back to his daily novel.

"But I have some fishing lines here that I'd like to—"

"Show the gentleman in!" cried a voice from somewhere, vastly like the editor's.

"That's the editor's."

"Twice also a nice warm day in June."

Also too there was spring fever lurking in the air and all around, and the lure of the fields and blossoms; the lazy hours smoking and dozing behind a lazier fishing rod, disturbed only by the thought of interfering with one's work shamefully—and pleasantly.

II.

"Ah," smiled the editor. "So you have some fishing lines?" And the vision of a day or two up in the country passed before his eyes.

These "fishing lines" the man had were in answer to the call of the woods and the rills in his blood; the distant babble of brookling brooks sounded musically in his ears.

"He would go—and that very afternoon."

"I want a good strong one," he mused. "One that will catch the biggest fish I'm prepared to tell about when I get home."

Diving to the bottom of his black bag, the man brought forth a lengthy manuscript.

"Mr. Editor, these lines are—"

"What lines?" lowering his brow suspiciously, the editor looked at the poem in the man's hand.

"These lines—well about fish—"

In April gorgeous often bite, But better still in May, When sunnies, bass and other fish Covert amidst the spray—"

"The shad he never takes a hook—"

The perch is different, however, He'll bite the bait or yank a hook In any sort of weather.

"The pickerel, he never picks and—"

IV.

With a clean-cut kick the man and his fishing "lines" flew out the window and landed comfortably, considering that the drop was two stories, on a bale of newspapers.

PLUM SKIN CAUSES DEATH

Hats More Changeable This Season
Than Women Themselves Is Verdict

By ELOISE.

Women may be changeable, but their hats this year are even more so. One may wear a barrel or a tam or a wide brimmed sailor or a Louis XVI hat tilted up in the back, down in the front. There are all sorts of adaptations of the tricorne and there are hats of all colors and textures. Among the eccentricities more hats that echo some historic type than have been assembled for a long time.

The millinery colors most favored by the French are black and white. One sees, however, much jade, much blue—ranging from soft old blue to the brilliant royal—jade, brown, and the nascent tints of autumn.

This latter is much used at present in charming, wide brimmed felt hats which are now taken out of the domain of purely sport wear and used as the winter's substitute for the leghorn. The prettiest French hats one can take into her hand and crush into a round ball. There seems to be no frame and no foundation and yet they are perfect frames for the faces they adorn. Ostrich feathers of all sorts and conditions find a place. They have a fascinating way of curling over the ears and necks of their wearers. The hats are black or of very dark colors and the feathers are bright.

Here are three shapes which are finding popularity among the girls and younger women. Three of the hats show the prevailing tendency to use feathers, while the tan shape is unadorned save for a fancy pin. The two hats on top which are built on similar lines have the brim curving up on one side, a feature which is new at one side is the only trimming needed.

The left is made of black tulle's plush with canary blonde feathers placed at a smart angle. Black cassawary feathers sweep down over the brim of the seal brown hat of pressed beaver on the right. The little French turban shows the black and white combination favored by the Parisian. It is a youthful hat with a pearl buckle holding a sweeping feather plume in place and carries out a smart color scheme when worn with ermine furs.

The tam o'shanter in one form or another seems an indispensable part of the hat equipment for the late fall and winter. This smart adaptation of the tam shape is made of black velvet with a top of embroidered marigold duvety. The large fancy pin placed with a sturdied carelessness at one side is the only trimming needed.

News Notes From Movieland

—BY DAISY DEAN—

Thomas Meighan is staging a return just like those Moore brothers. Tom has always been a popular actor, but he has usually appeared in support of some beautiful feminine star who took all of the laurels as far as press notices and electric lights went. But the girls have always been strong for Tom, even if he wasn't starred in his own right, and they flocked to see him.

He has played with such stars as Mary Pickford, Marguerite Clark, Billie Burke and Norma Talmadge. For some time little was heard of him and then he reappeared, playing for the most part in all-star productions. Tom's most recent success was in "The Miracle Man," a play which has had record runs in almost every city where it has been shown. Here Tom came into his own again. Although there were several other important parts which were well acted, Tom Meighan showed once more that he should be starred.

His next production will be "The Admirable Crichton," a Barrie play which has been adapted to the screen. Here the admirable Tommy plays Crichton, the admirable butler. The play promises much in the way of entertainment and it surely gives Mr. Meighan a part of considerable possibilities. Gloria Swanson plays the leading feminine role.

WITH THE WOMEN OF TODAY

Mrs. M. L. Rowe.

The ability to turn barns into howers of beauty has something to do with the immense success overseas of Mrs. M. L. Rowe of Omaha, Neb., who has just come back after serving as a canteen worker in France for the American Red Cross. When America entered the war, she dropped everything and listed for service overseas. Turning old barns into attractive canteens was one of her achievements on the other side.

"It was remarkable," said one of Mrs. Rowe's fellow workers, "how she could take an old tumble-down barn and with a bit of paint, some crotonne and a lamp or two she would evolve the most charming reading or writing room imaginable."

Mrs. Rowe says she herself never realized what possibilities there were in an old ramshackle, unused barn. She thinks it would be a good plan to have a club house for community meetings and gatherings could easily be made from some old barn with but little expenditure and if these things were done in this country Mrs. Rowe's work abroad will not have been a mere temporary thing, but it will have lasting value.

"Perry" Probably Found
A "Pot of Gold"

[By International News.] San Francisco, Cal.—Somewhere today there's a lucky laborer known only as "Perry."

Perry is his first name. He was helping excavate the basement of a building here when his shovel struck the bones of a human and then an iron chest. He tugged at the chest, hauled away from the scene as fast as he could and has not been heard from since.

His fellow workers believe he found a "pot of gold." He has called to return for wages due him from the contractor.

ANOTHER WOMAN POLITICIAN

Once a stock girl in a department store, now clerk of a New York municipal court, Miss Elizabeth M. Barry is an instance of the fact women have an equal chance with men in business and politics. Miss Barry, daughter of a Tammany politician, is rated one of the best electioneers in the democratic party.

QUEEN OCCUPATION

Mrs. C. M. Pickett of New York is the only woman lobster dealer in the country. Tempting lobsters, served in some of the most popular of the "palaces," come from the nets of Mrs. Pickett. Friends told her it couldn't be done, but in a short time she has built up her trade so that daily she ships more than hundred barrels. She does a great deal of the lobster "harvesting" herself.

Heart and Home Problems

BY ELIZABETH THOMPSON.
LETTERS MAY BE ADDRESSED TO MRS. THOMPSON, IN CARE OF THE GAZETTE.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: We are preparing for a fall party to be given at a club room, and as we have a little experience in such an affair we wish you would let us know what would be the best kind of games, and what kind of eats would be best to serve at a party of this kind. We are inviting the lady friends of our members to attend, which we want to show a good time, so we would be pleased to have all the information you can give us regarding this affair.

Also, what decorations would be the best.
It is impossible to devote space in my column to questions concerning entertaining. You can find information in women's magazines for the month of October and also in books on entertaining.

Serve cider, doughnuts and pumpkin pie.
Corn husks, autumn leaves and pumpkins make attractive decorations for a fall party.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a girl twenty years old. About one year ago I met a fellow and lately he has stopped and talked to me. I can't find out if he is married or not. I am sure he is not, as I have taken a great fancy to him. Could you give me any advice to win him back?

UNHAPPY.
I think you have lost your opportunity. It may be, however, if you speak in a friendly way the young man will show further interest in you.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: There is a young man who lives near my home who has tried to go with me, but I have not gone with him much. He has written letters, some of which I ignore entirely, but once he asked for a place in my heart and

She Married an Average Man

By ZOE BECKLEY.

Jim brought Charles Belton to the hotel to dinner this evening. Here is the essence of the conversation that passed after we had settled ourselves in the crimson and gold supper room.

"You're looking lovelier than ever tonight, Mrs. Ann!" This from Belton, his small brown eyes (always slightly pink-rimmed) traveling swiftly from my hair over my bare arms, down my bare arms, following the skirt of my midnight-blue frock to my slipped foot.

"It's because I'm feeling so amiable, so smart, so triumphant and so terribly well satisfied with myself," I laughed, paying no attention to his flattering, fluttering gaze.

"Hear, hear!" cried Jim in a subdued shout. "New York has already shown our lady of her Centerville necktie."

"You—you have a home, Mr. Salisbury?"
Jim and Charles Belton exchanged glances.

"That, already?" exclaimed Jim. "And haven't I a home, too?" asked Belton. They spoke almost in one breath. I was taken aback and showed it.

"I thought you'd be delighted at my enterprise, Jimmie. You agreed to leave it all to me." Turning to Belton, I added: "They haven't put you out of your bachelor quarters have they? I understand they are always tearing down and building up in New York without regard for anybody's convenience or household goods."

And they exchanged glances, which annoyed me unexpectably.
"Come, come!" I scolded, "what all you two boys? You act as if you'd been hatching a plot."

Household Hints

MENU HINT
Breakfast: Graham, Griddle Cakes and Brown Sugar Syrup. Coffee.
Luncheon: Toast with Dressing. Fruit. Hot Chocolate.
Dinner: Hungarian Goulash. String Beans. White Bread and Butter. Fruit Salad. Vanilla Wafers. Coffee.

TWO RAMEKIN DISHES
Steam Egg in Ramekin—Break eggs carefully so as not to crush yolk. Put in ramekin which has been buttered; set ramekin in small pan of hot water to reach half the depth of ramekin; cover pan with foil and white is first (about four minutes). Sprinkle with salt and a little paprika.

If there is a tablespoon of left-over chicken, crop it fine, season nicely and put egg on top and steam as told above. Any little left-over meat can be used the same way.

With the above serve three or four bran balls, a little jelly or jam, corn and cup of coffee.

Creamed Potatoes—Nothing goes better with a roast than creamed potatoes. In the large brown ramekin and use cold spiced pickles and add some pickles, some from an oven. All is ready prepared except the potatoes. Cut these into small pieces and boil in water to cover for a few minutes. Salt the water. When the potato tubers are soft enough to be pierced with a fork remove and drain and put into a white sauce which you have made in the meantime with a cup of milk, a tablespoonful of butter and the same of flour. Stir all together in saucepan with gas low and then smooth add potatoes. Simmer for a minute and serve. Pepper with paprika. Artistic but not fiery.

TESTED RECIPES.
Toast With Dressing—Finger-shaped pieces of toast, one cooked cold sausage, one teaspoon boiled rice, salt and pepper to taste, two tablespoons tomato sauce.

Skin sausage and cut into slices; an eighth of an inch thick; put tomato sauce into small pan; add rice and season to taste; arrange some of the slices of sausage on each piece of toast; let them slightly overlap each other; spread the sauce over them; heat in the oven for a few minutes and serve at once.

Hungarian Goulash—One and a half pounds in veal cubes, one-quarter teaspoon paprika, two potatoes, diced, one-half cup drippings, one-quarter cup water, one-half cup of cream, one-half teaspoon salt, one-quarter teaspoon black pepper, two sliced onions.

Put the drippings in a kettle, when hot add onions, and fry, add veal and cook till brown; add the water, cover closely and cook very slowly until meat is tender, then add seasonings and place tomatoes on top of meat, cover and cook until potatoes are tender, but not falling apart. Then add cream and cook two minutes longer.

OPOSSUM MODISH SINCE OTHER FUR IS UNOBTAINABLE

By ELOISE

Have you noticed the number of fur coats and suits? They surely are plentiful this year. Manufacturers and modistes are bewailing the fact that so many garments must be turned out without any fur adornment. The reason is the scarcity of peltry. Many houses have been unable to purchase fur at any price. There seems to be just one item which is obtainable at a fair price, and that is Australian opossum. This fur, which is not as pretty as many of the imported pelts, is practical because it combines prettily with almost any color.

This girlish suit is fashioned of a French blue shade of tinsel. The skirt is plain and rather short. The coat has a plain tight bodice with the flaring ripple peplum. The peplum and fashionable high collar are Australian opossum. The large hat is black panne velvet and is untrimmed save for a band of narrow silver ribbon about the base of the crown. Tan suede gloves and broadcloth spurs to match, worn with low-heeled patent leather pumps, complete the outfit. The headed bag, because it combines prettily with almost any color.

WAITERS' SCORN TIPS.
London—Training waiters is one of the schemes of the British and Allied Waiters, Choic and Hotel Employees' union. One of the waiters' sayings was a skilled trade. It is proposed to initiate the apprenticeship system, thereby improving the service and reducing competition. Demands to be placed before employers include: Abolition of tips as a wage factor; minimum wage; public daily menu for pay starting at five shillings; extra pay for Sundays and holidays. The association has a membership of 17,000.

REBUILDING THE LOCOMOTOR ATAXIA INVALID (4)

Very simple exercises and precision movements described in the three first articles of this series on locomotor ataxia and allied nervous diseases in which control over the muscles is impaired, may be carried on with greater benefit than the exercises hitherto. As the underlying thought is well expressed by Dr. William J. M. A. Maloney in his monograph on locomotor ataxia, the ataxic individual is clumsy and inaccurate, as in drunken persons, must be taught to move, not in response to the eyes, but to the "motor images." There Dr. Maloney gives the great secret of success in muscle education for the invalid of locomotor ataxia or any other nervous disease which produces impaired muscle control. One of the earliest symptoms in many cases of locomotor ataxia is loss of postural control, which brings the patient to fall with eyes closed, precisely what position certain parts may be in especially if the limbs be moved by the examiner.

Dr. Maloney further writes: "A watched movement is clumsy. (In normal person); a watched tubercle movement is ataxic and involves loss of control which produces impaired muscle control. One of the earliest symptoms in many cases of locomotor ataxia is loss of postural control, which brings the patient to fall with eyes closed, precisely what position certain parts may be in especially if the limbs be moved by the examiner."

A person fatigued is less capable of attending closely to his postural images or the sense of position which should control movements than he is when rested.

Fatigue is therefore the deadly enemy of a patient with locomotor ataxia as well as it is of the child with St. Vitus' Dance.

Connoisseurs close their eyes unconsciously when they wish to appreciate a very delicate peltry or sensibility. Shutting out visual images increases the sense of position.

GIRLS OF TODAY

By HELEN RANDOLPH

The other day, I heard two friends greeting each other after one had been absent for several years. The married one, who was also much the younger, exclaimed in surprise: "Aren't you ever going to get any older?"

"What's the use?" responded the bachelor girl, "I don't believe in it." And after all, although marriage brings a couple who make for aging a woman, isn't age largely a matter of mental attitude? The person who keeps young in his thoughts, associates with lively, progressive people and keeps busy, hasn't time to grow old, and is slow to do so. A group of women taking physical culture lessons from an instructor at a popular summer resort last summer, were asked to guess the instructor's age. They replied variously from 55 to 60 years. What was their surprise to hear him say that he was over 70 years of age?

But the instructor was young-looking and as supple as a man many years his junior, because he had kept himself young through proper living and proper thinking.

In olden times, a woman of 35 considered herself almost in the grand-

They have learned the secret of keeping young and attractive, and are making the most of it. He who considers himself old, is old, but he who considers himself young, is wise.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Dear Miss Randolph: I have received the announcement of a friend's marriage. Should I send a wedding gift?

Perplexed.
It is not necessary to send a gift in response to such an announcement. However, if the friend is an especially good one, it would be nice if you would send a gift. It rests with you.

Dear Miss Randolph: My brother says that girls who flirt with fellows on the streets are cheap and vulgar. Don't you think there ever are circumstances under which a nice girl might get acquainted with a man in this way?

Molly.
Seldom, if ever, does a nice girl condescend to flirt. Then, too, what kind of men are flirts? Men one can meet in such a manner are not worth knowing, and the same applies to girls, too.

Dear Miss Randolph: I am shy when out in company. Is there any way in which I can overcome this?

Modesty.
Perhaps you remember a story some years ago about a girl thus affected, who had come her shyness by the motto: "Everybody's lonesome." Just remember you are just like everybody else after all and try to forget yourself, but to think rather of other people.

ESCAPED FOR WEDDING

Bristol.—W. Whitefield, the veterinary Bristol mink agent, who recently celebrated his golden wedding told the story of his marriage and how he escaped to be wed.

"I was in the 98th regiment, stationed at Newcastle-on-Tyne, and was undergoing 'C. B.' for being absent," said he. "To get to my fiancée's house for the wedding I had to scale a wall of the barracks when the sentry was not looking. I walked eight miles in the night and was married the next day. I returned to the barracks three days later, and there spent my honeymoon—seven days' luck drill. And I had seven days' pay stopped too."

THE ROMANCE OF TRUE STORIES OF SUCCESSFUL WOMEN

EDITH MORIARTY

From the time when Maude Hopkins first knew what the stage was she determined that she wanted to be an actress. When she was but a scanty four years old, she enjoyed speaking her little pieces and singing her little songs for her mother's guests. At school she was quick to memorize her lessons, and learning bits of poetry and history were but play for her. Her mother and father believed in developing any talents which a child might have and so they sent Maude to a school of expression and rhetoric when she was nine years old.

Maude enjoyed every minute of her time spent at the school and each day her desire grew to take up acting as a profession. When her father and mother finally saw how they were shocked and worried besides. They did not want their daughter to go on the stage regardless of what her talents were. They began to regret the fact that they had ever sent her to a elocution teacher. It will be hard for most girls in these days to realize the place of Maude. She had been reared in an atmosphere of protection that almost meant exclusion from the outside world. To go against the wishes of her parents to leave home and follow the profession she wanted to enter, never occurred to her, and if it had she would never have done it. She knew exactly what she wanted to do and she began to believe that perhaps the stage was not the place for her.

Forced to Give Up Stage Career.

Maude was so very enthusiastic about her dramatic work, however, that she begged her parents to let her go to a higher school of expression, and, after promising them that she would never go on the stage, they consented. For three years she enjoyed herself by taking part in the school plays and often, when professional shows would need extras, Maude would be among the numbers sent from her school to act as "supers." Her parents objected slightly to this, but they felt that they had to be satisfied with her promise, and if she enjoyed the little parts she played and was satisfied to stop there, they would try to be reasonable.

To say Maude enjoyed them is putting it mildly, but she was far from satisfied with the manner in which she was allowed to do. She still had the desire to be a great actress and because she intended to live up to her promise, she tried to make the most of the little parts she played. When she finished the course at the school she wondered what she would do. Most of the girls were going to New York to try to make real jobs. She must stay home and perhaps work in an office or teach school or do some other, common place work, all of which seemed dead-end jobs when compared with a stage career.

Starts Teaching Elocution.

Then after many weeks of idleness and brooding she hit upon a plan which she thought might help her a little to forget the stage, at least as far as a career for herself was concerned. She decided that she would give elocution lessons to other girls, who wanted to act and who would be permitted to go on the stage. She advertised the matter and soon had five pupils, all hoping to be Sara Bernhardt in a few weeks' time. It was not many months before her pupils had increased to the number of 25 and Maude was earning as much as any of her girl friends who had gone into business and she seemed to enjoy her work far more than any of them. She used to brag upon the third floor of her house for her "school room." After her first year of teaching she gave a play and all of her pupils took part. She enjoyed that play more than any she had ever seen or taken part in and she fully decided that she would continue teaching.

Enter New Field.

Her own home town did not seem to offer her the opportunities and possibilities she wanted and she planned to go to a nearby city which boasted of many schools, a college, and countless dramatic clubs. She moved to the city in the early fall before the school started, settled in the heart of the college district and again advertised. She received a few pupils and these soon brought her others until she had many more than 25. That was what she moved to the city for, however, but when she began to be hired by dramatic clubs which planned to give monthly plays, and to be retained as the trainer for college and school dramas, she knew that she had made a mistake. She was far better off in her own town than she was in the city. She is well known for the plays she has produced for the college and various other schools and organizations. She has a class of men and women who are training in public speaking, and she has had to limit the number of private lessons she gives to 20 pupils. She is having most of the fun of a stage career and a producer's career in one without the hardships which accompany both. She is far better off than she was in the city.

THE GAZETTE'S PAGE OF SPORTS

NEXT YEAR WILL BE GREAT ONE FOR GOLF

Golf promises to come in for some real attention in 1920 with more than $40,000 already offered as prizes for four professional tournaments. With such a sum to play for, America can expect to see Vardon, Braid, Taylor, Duncan, Ray, Reid, Mitchell and Blosser, the Frenchman, come over from Europe to play for the titles and stakes.

Cities mentioned as the scenes of these four big tournaments are New York, Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, and possibly Detroit. The Michigan city has long cast envious eyes at things sporting, and is determined to go after the big golf events this coming summer. One young broker is said to have stated his willingness to offer $10,000 for the professionals if the tourney is played at Detroit. Such an offer will certainly mean a tourney in the automobile town.

According to experts, the $10,000 in prizes to be divided at each of the tournaments will be as follows: First $4,000, second $2,000, third $1,000, fourth $500, fifth $300, sixth $200, seventh $100, eighth $50, ninth $25, tenth $20.

"This is money enough to make many an expert think twice about competing from amateur to professional. It surely means an international tourney on this side this coming summer, and since golf history was made this past summer at Pittsburgh, more history promises to be made in the summer of 1920."

ROGER BRESNAHAN QUITS BASEBALL

Another well known figure is about to leave baseball in the person of Roger Bresnahan, former member of McGraw's Giants, boss at St. Louis and manager of the Toledo club in the American association. Bresnahan after sinking $25,000 in the Toledo venture, is now willing to get out with a partial amount of his original investment and turn his attention to other channels in which men win their daily bread.

Bresnahan's story, or his Toledo plunge is not without its pitiful lines. Almost at the zenith of his career as a ball player, Bresnahan elected to make his fortune as a manager. It was his first attempt and he relied not a little on his popularity as a major league star to pull him through.

What he invested in the Toledo proposition constituted his savings. It was necessary for him to invest all he had in order to gain control of the club. From the first day he appeared as the club's manager, his troubles began. His team was a mere excuse for an association outfit, games were lost almost as certainly as they were played. His showing was miserable and then patrons lost interest.

One thing after another took him into the spotlight. Domestic difficulties gave him publicity that did not help his baseball venture, and later he had wrangles with the amateurs of the city. Toledo is one of the amateur hotbeds of the country.

Falling in one thing after another, Bresnahan finally quarreled with his stockholders and they in turn asked him to step out in the hope that a stranger might make it pay. Even this sacrifice failed and now the club is being taken over by local capital and Bresnahan will be paid "something" to hand over his control and step completely out of the picture. In the meantime Father Time dealt him a blow for he is no longer able to earn a living as a ball player. He is turning ready to learn another business now, when he should have been able to retire comfortably on his earnings from the national pastime.

Slosson	0	3	92	10 1-12

New York, Oct. 23.—Real championship form was displayed in yesterday's matches of the national 18.2 ball-tie championship billiard tournament in the Hotel Astor.

Jack Schaefer, son of the late "Wizard," defeated Koji Yamada by 400 to 32 in five innings, running out with an unfinished string of 8. Incidentally he made a new high run record of 155 in the second inning. He had another run of 148.

Willie Hoppe performed a similar feat when he defeated George Sutton by 400 to 38 in five innings with an unfinished run of 91. His best run was 110, but Sutton ran up 148 in the fourth and 122 in the fifth. He gave Hoppe many anxious moments.

Sutton disposed of Walker Cochran by 400 to 82 in ten innings. Cochran was nervous and seemed unable to get started. This was Cochran's second defeat.

Ora Morningstar trounced George Slosson to his third consecutive defeat by a score of 400 to 203 in thirteen innings. Ora ran up 137 in the sixth and 149 in the seventh. Slosson's best was 95 in the eleventh.

UNIVERSITY SEERS EXCITED OVER "NEW" PLANET

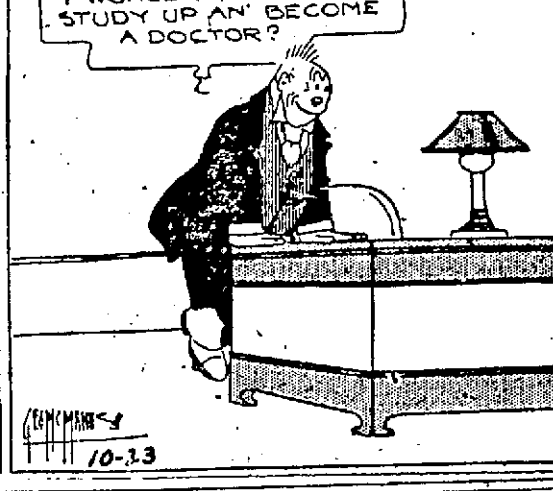

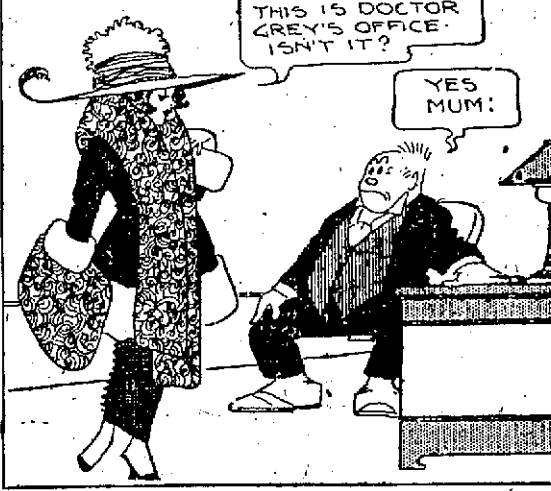

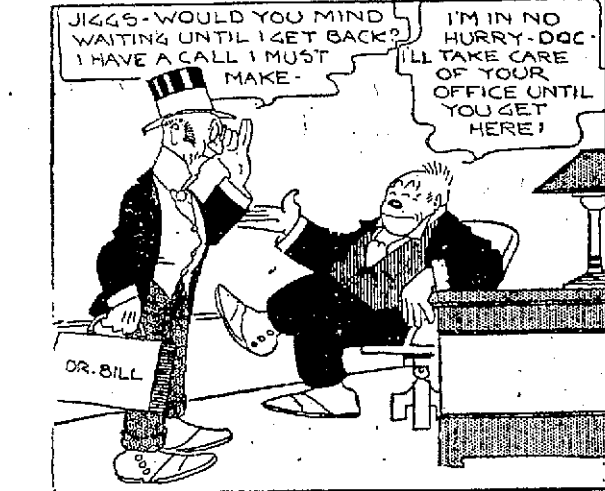

New York.—The astronomers of a local university were greatly excited the other night over the discovery of a brand new planet in the sky. The planet was surrounded by an individual moon and a group of new satellites.

The biggest telescope in the observatory was brought out to study the phenomena and hurried calls were sent to other professors and scientists to come to the observatory. At the height of the excitement it was noted that a dark line, like a hair, seemed to run across the face of the telescope. The glass was polished but still the "hair" remained.

Suddenly one of the professors saw a box kite riding the kite breeze and noted that the hair line ran from the kite through the "new planet" to a dormitory. Investigation showed that a student had rigged up the "phenomenon" which was suspended from the kite and lighted by a candle.

SPORT SNAP-SHOTS

BY JACK KEENE.

The Cincinnati Reds, new champions of the world, are now receiving long overdue recognition as a first class ball club. Until they battered the White Sox to a pulp in the first game of the big series and then swept on to one of the most clean-cut triumphs ever registered in the history of the annual classic they were widely underrated. Not only were they lightly regarded as world's series contenders, but they were held at a clip that made them look like 2 to 1 favorites in the pennant chase, and the Cubs and Braves were going extremely well. McGraw often pointed out to those associated with him that the Reds were the real rivals of his men.

Pat Moran has a better ball club than most people seem to think he has. McGraw frequently said, "There are a lot of clever players on the team and Pat has welded a powerful combination. The Reds can hit the ball and they are getting the pitching. Furthermore they think they are going to win and it is going to be difficult to persuade them otherwise."

All through the season the Reds played a steady brand of ball and did not fall into a single damaging slump. Their work wasn't always spectacular, but they usually managed to bob up with enough runs to win any time the going became rough. The light they made against the Giants was an uphill one and was conducted as gallantly as any the National league has known in many a day. Lacking the melodramatic features of the Braves' push for the title in 1914, it nevertheless was replete with startling incidents.

Through all the stress of the fighting the Reds "carried on" much as they did against the Sox.

It is rather surprising that a majority of those who saw both teams in action during the pennant races conceded an easy victory to the Sox in the world series. Certainly in two crucial series with the Giants the Reds played well enough to have beaten any team that could have been pitted against them. They backed their way through the Giants with a vigor born of explicit confidence in themselves, and they carried that same spirit into the series with the Sox. They weren't a bit awed by the halfheartedness that preceded the entrance of the Sox into Cincinnati any more than they were abashed when they faced the Giants at crucial stages of the National league pennant scramble.

Part of the secret of the Reds' success—if, indeed, there be any secret—lies in the ability of Pat Moran to get the most out of his players. Of course, he has under his command in Cincinnati a number of recognized stars of the game, but he has, in the space of one short season, developed one or two others from mediocre performers into mighty good ones. Also he has instilled into them all a spirit of aggressiveness hitherto unknown on Redland teams and their defeat of the Sox has served to increase their belief in their own prowess. They'll be a hard team to stop in 1920.

London.—"It is really remarkable that in these cases of defrauding railway companies women are by far the worst offenders," declared the magistrate at Ascot in fining Miss Lillian Ascot $10 for not paying her fare for traveling on the London and North Western Railway.

LIGHTNING'S FREAK.
Lon.—At the inquest into the death of Percival Simpson, who was killed by lightning while standing under a tree, it developed that there was an exact image of the tree on the man's stomach.

SOLDIERS INSPECT BIG BEN.
London.—Fifty disabled soldiers who are being trained in watch and clock repairing climbed the 300 steps of the Westminster Tower and inspected the works of Big Ben, the tower clock.

London.—A woman who summoned her husband for assault told the Barnstable magistrate that he struck her with an accordion which he was playing in the street and then played "You Taught Me How to Love You, Now Teach Me to Forget."

AIR RACE AROUND THE WORLD.
New York.—The Aero Club of America and the Aerial League of America have announced the appointment of a committee to make plans for the first aerial derby around the world. The big air race will be held in 1920.

Members of the committee are making a trip around the world to map out the course. They are Commodore Louis D. Beaumont, president; Major Charles J. Gilden, executive secretary, and Benjamin Hillman.

FINGERS GOOD BAIT.
Newton, N. J. Robert Chamberlain of Allentown, Pa., while rowing ashore empty handed from a fishing trip at Budd's lake, near here, was startled when he put his hand in the water to find a huge pickerel that had evaded lures all day hanging on to several of his fingers.

Chamberlain landed the fish in his boat. This at least is his story. A jealous rival fisherman spread the report that the "pickerel" Chamberlain caught was a snapping turtle.

MEMORIAL TO ATHLETES.
Paris.—A monster all-sports meeting will be held for the purpose of raising funds to erect a monument to athletes who fell in the war. Another proposition also seeks to raise a monument to the memory of French and allied boxers who made the supreme sacrifice.
